

Services for Library Users with Disabilities

The staff of the Mercer University Libraries is committed to providing equal access to people with disabilities.

Like all library users, people with disabilities can receive research assistance from the University Libraries staff. Mercer students who need extensive help are encouraged to make appointments by contacting us.

Library users who need physical assistance retrieving library materials (for example, reaching a book or journal on a high shelf) can ask for assistance from library staff at one of the service desks.

Members of the Mercer community who require any other accommodations should contact the library and the office of Access and Accommodations to make arrangements.
